Is your teen talking pot?

the dirt on weed.com
Have a blunt conversation

Your teen is talking pot — so who’s dealing their info?

Any kind of smoking causes lung damage, and marijuana smoke is just as harmful as nicotine smoke.

Teens who smoke marijuana have a one in six chance of becoming addicted — PLUS, they’re seven times more likely to become hooked on nicotine and three times more likely to be problem drinkers.

Marijuana can influence mood disorders like anxiety and depression, which can affect performance in school and sports.

Marijuana can cause emotional distress, which can impact relationships and coping skills.

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) opposes marijuana use by anyone under 21 — for recreational and medicinal purposes — because of its significant effect on brain development.

Looking for ways to talk with your kids about weed? Visit TheDirtOnWeed.com for more information.